About Us

The Audubon Society of Great Denver has been serving the Denver community since 1969. Our primary focus is birds, other wildlife, and the habitats of the South Platte Basin. We provide programming for all ages, from our popular Beginning Birding Class to school programs offered at the schools, to family events and programs at the Audubon Center at Chatfield.

Discover Nature

• Classes and Public Programs

From one day workshops to a 6-week Beginning Birdwatching class, there is something to interest just about anyone! These programs are a great way to get involved with us and meet like-minded people.

• Travel and Field Trips

We offer field trips within the Denver area, throughout Colorado, and travel opportunities around the world.

• School and Group Programs

Our outreach programs and field trips are hands-on experiences, presented by professional staff and knowledgeable naturalists, and are designed to compliment your curriculum. Experience Audubon in your classroom or at the Audubon Center at Chatfield.

Get Involved

• Master Birders

The only program in Colorado that provides advanced training in birding and certification.

• Conservation Advocacy Group

Serves to keep an "eagle eye" on governmental policies and actions that affect the South Platte watershed and other areas of concern to our members.

• Lois Webster Fund

Offers grants to support education and research about Colorado's non-game wildlife. Applications are available on the ASGD website.

• Bluebird Project

Members and volunteers work to improve bluebird populations in Colorado by offering programs and building, selling, and monitoring bluebird nest boxes.
